2nd read together

Second read- both the teacher and adult read together some of the new words (particularly those repeated throughout the story) should now be familiar and this read should be less choppy and broken.

Both men stood very still.

Then Robin said, "Let me get past, will you?"

"I will not," grunted John.

"Then I will shoot an arrow at your chest!"
Robin took an arrow from his belt.

John shook his head.
"I have only a stick in my hand," he said.
"I don't mind having a contest, but you must put that arrow back and find a stick.
Then I will set upon you, and I will win!"

Hold a sentence

Rehearsing a sentence before writing helps a child remember what they want to write. Early writers are bogged down with spelling as they write. This rehearsal(the sillier the better) helps recall as they go back over what is written so far and needs to come next.

Don't forget. Check you've included these before revealing and marking your answer.

Hold a Sentence 1- Reveal

Checking/ Marking your own work reinforces what has been taught, trains the brain to store those common words with difficult spelling patterns (red words- words you can't sound out just need to know how to spell –e.g. the, was, said) and build up a spelling vocabulary.
